

HISTORY

A Level Course

Description

History asks "How did things get to be this way?" Through historical research, students will recognise complicated events and explore the causes that led to it as well as the consequences. At the same time, students will recognise that there are far more opinions of the past than meet the eye. This allows students to study different historiographical opinions of events and develop skills to make their own informed judgement. All of these skills are covered in the course as well as an analysis of sources. From these sources, students will question the usefulness of the source alongside their own knowledge. Ultimately, students will become clear thinkers, great writers, articulate speakers and possess the ability to analyse and explain problems.

Entry Requirements

GCSE Average: 4.8. GCSE grade 6 in English, Grade 6 in History.

Progression

History provides students with skills to be analytical and form convincing arguments, which are highly valued by universities and employers in any area. Taking History will enable students to do a wide range of subjects at university as it compliments other analytical subjects such as the sciences, English, Maths and Economics. Students will also be well equipped to follow careers such as:

law, economics, politics, publishing, marketing, diplomacy, broadcasting, TV research, international relations and public affairs.
